[2nd Floor]

Maple House 2nd floor is a male-only floor with about 30 guys in total! We have a great mix of unique personalities, and whether we are having deep discussions in the kitchen late at night or heading out together to grab a bite, every day is lively and fulfilling. While we respect each other's personal space and maintain a comfortable sense of distance, everyone gets loud and lively together in the social spaces. I think our floor strikes the perfect balance between offering a peaceful, comfortable space to relax and being full of energy when it is time to have fun. Because we have such a diverse group of unique people with different backgrounds and perspectives, every day brings new inspiration and discoveries. Joining us on the second floor of Maple House will definitely make your university life unforgettable!

[3rd Floor]

People living in Maple House 3rd floor are very outgoing just like our floor color, yellow. Many of us love dorm events and gathering in the kitchen to make food together. But you know, if I say this, I might scare some of you who aren't interested in participating in these gatherings. But don't worry. Even with fun, we all value having our own personal times. It often gets crowded and excited during dinner time, but people on our floor are good at catching the right distance, not getting too much into others' personal space. This isn't because we don't like each other, but it is just to respect our own lives which college students should have. So even when we're watching TV, we don't have to push ourselves to talk to each other; we are comfortable even when we're watching in silence. So to all, either wanting to participate in dorm gatherings or not, let's together find a place where we can all live with happiness!

[4th Floor]

Maple House 4th Floor is often described as the most “independent” floor among the newer dormitories. Around 30 residents live together on the same floor, but each person values their own time and lifestyle, creating a comfortable atmosphere where everyone can truly be themselves. That said, the floor is never cold or distant. Whenever someone feels like talking or simply does not want to be alone, they can stop by the kitchen or social room and naturally find others there. Before long, people are chatting, laughing, and spending time together. Sometimes we make late-night trips to the convenience store for ice cream, and other times a few people who happen to gather in the kitchen end up going to the bath together and talking for hours. These small, everyday moments are what make Maple House 4th Floor so special 🍁 Because everyone respects each other’s personal space, there is a relaxed atmosphere where people do not interfere too much in one another’s lives—in a good way. That is why both alone time and time spent together feel equally comfortable here. Residents on Maple House 4th Floor are also conscious about saving electricity. As a result, when viewed from outside at night, our floor sometimes looks much darker than the others and even a little lonely at first glance, haha. But in a way, that also reflects our lifestyle: we enjoy our freedom while still being responsible and considerate. The charm of Maple House 4th Floor lies in the balance between independence and connection—a place where you can comfortably be yourself, while always knowing there is someone nearby when you need company.

[5th Floor]

Members living on the 5th floor are all friendly and welcoming. Many are living super healthy lives, going to bed and waking up early, cooking their own meals— that their daily routines have become almost like that of retirees. On the other hand, there are people who stay up late watching movies along with endless chatting. Just like this, one of the best things to be in the dorm is that you get to spend time with people. One of the characteristics of the 5th floor is that there is no hierarchy. Whether talking to a senior or a classmate, we can discuss anything— academics, relationships, or just casual chit-chat—and get all kinds of advice. For events, the parties are held when new residents move in, or graduates and international students leave the dorm. No matter how bad your day might have been, you can feel all better by instantly seeing everyone in the kitchen laughing so hard at some random silly topic. Maple 5th floor is such a kind and warm place and we would love to have you as a part of it.
